I love Choctawhatchee High School. The teachers and students were all very welcoming. The teachers are always ready to work and are very organized. They are ready for whatever comes their way and are always up to teaching one on one. The staff is very helpful and is always doing things to help the students. All of the students are also willing to learn and take in anyone and everyone that they don't know.

I loved Choctaw, I loved my few friends. But aside from that, the school is falling apart in every sense of the word. The bathrooms were closed 90% of my junior and senior years. The staff was okay on a good day. I chose to enroll in Dual Enrollment and after that guidance people didn't care for me anymore. I see students talking about how their councilors changed their lives, meanwhile, I can't get an email back from mine, let alone see them in person. The only good teachers in the whole school are a couple of senior teachers, I could count on two hands how many good teachers there were in the whole school. It was a toxic environment all around, my friends and I were being harassed and I asked the girl to stop and she reported me for bullying. When I was called up I had receipts proving my innocence and no one believed me. It's very corrupt and I could go on for days about all the help Choctawhatchee High School needs, contact me for a detailed description of my experience.

Overall, my experience at Choctaw was fun. I enjoyed and participated in many afterschool activities, had decent lunches, met a lot of really cool and accepting people, and was blessed to receive teachers the select few who cared about my education. Though my overall experience at Choctaw was good, there are some still some obvious factors that need to be improved upon. This includes more diverse Honors, AP, and IB classes, more resources to help dual enrollment students, more insightful councilors, better facilities, and plumbing the downstairs bathroom flooded quite a few times during the school year. Despite these factors, I was able to make my first two years exciting. Please take this with a grain of salt because this school isn't for everyone, and remember wherever you end up you have the power to make your experience good or bad.

I attended this high school all four years. I graduated with a 3.5 GPA. I did not enjoy going to high school but I had a huge opportunity to start my college education early. The high school had dual-enrollment courses offered at the high school so students did not even have to leave campus! I also was able to attend a college and receive high school and college credit for the courses I attended. The one thing I would change about the school is getting rid of the dance team coach. She has injured numerous dancers by practicing unethical forms of training.

One of the world's best bands and sports teams! Not football anymore though Decent engineering and aviation classes. Schools are showing it's age. I would recommend if you either want to be apart of a famous band program, play with one of the best basketball teams and dance teams, Have an interest in engineering then this is the school for you. The only recommendation is when i attended here they installed a 12-foot fence around the school.
